FOREWORD

We, the Senior Class of 1977, desirous of leaving something by which we may be remembered, are publishing this scrapbook in the hope that you will have as much pleasure in reading it as we have had in editing it.

DEDICATION

We, the Senior Class of 1937, dedicate this scrapbook to Mr. Rumbaugh, who has so faithfully and generously devoted his time and efforts for our own betterment and good.

CLASS HISTORY

We started out on our maiden flight in the good airship, M.H.S., 1933, with 32 passengers aboard and Mr. Houchin as the pilot. Under the able leadership of our instructors, we soared through the clouds of Algebra, English, and Biology.

We began the second lap of our long journey with only 30 passengers aboard, having left some behind at the last airport. For this journey we again were fortunate in securing Mr. Houchin as pilot. We flew over Mt. Latin and battled against the strong tail winds of Ancient History. Then Alas! we began to lose altitude as we circled Geometry, but the winds shifted in our favor and we pulled out of the forboding tail-spin, and landed safely on the field at Junior Airport.

We encountered many difficulties but also many new and wonderful experiences on the third lap of our flight. This time Mr. Rumbaugh took over the controls and proved himself a resourceful and competent pilot. Edith Swanson of Crown Point joined the ranks of the Jolly Junior Air Corps on this third lap. On the 16th of May, we took the seniors on board and entertained them at a banquet in their honor. We have every reason to believe that it was much of a success as the Junior Dance given sometime previous. Oh, yes, our ranks were again lessened by two, first, when Geneva Burge decided to take up matrimony and second, when Thomas Pecquignot was called away to an Everlasting Sleep.

A joyous day it was indeed, when after refueling our trusty old airship with the oil of knowledge and the grease

of experience, we boarded it for the last time and once more left our home port to soar into the realm of knowledge. On and ever onward, we sliced our way through the sullen clouds of Bureaucracy, over the vast ocean of English, and down through the dense fog of Government. Some of the class even went so far as to soar over the peaks of Public Speaking. Our flight is nearly completed when--what's this?-- we're dropping. Oh, I see, the pilot's levelling off and two of our boys are preparing to make a parachute jump.
Happy landings, boys, and we hope you contact Father Education next year and try the flight again! Well, we now have only 15 of the original 32 who began the journey. Fasten your safety-belts, everybody, we're going to land!
Now that we have landed, let us consider some of the things we have gained during our journey. Somewhere along the route we have accumulated a few ideas. Perhaps these are not important in themselves, but we must remember that ideas beget ideas. Then there are some ideas or notions that we have discarded, believing it is sometimes as important to unlearn things as to learn them. We know that we arrive at sound conclusions through investigation and logical thinking. We know that unsound notions are accumulated without effort. We know that it is the quality of security that gives sense its value. We, no doubt, believe many things simply because they are comforting to us. We hope we can distinguish between uncommon sense and common nonsense. If we are accused of being impractical, we answer our critics

by saying that it is hard to have their definition of "practical." If some of our ideas are idealistic, they will be hard to live by. If our aim is to be divided between living and making a living, we are sure that the ability to read and enjoy good literature is just as practical as the knowledge of how to harness a horse. If you disagree with the foregoing statement, we accuse you of being impractical in your definition of "practical." In other words, we believe that it is as important to live as to make a living.

Though we have alighted from the good ship, M.H.S., we shall soon take up our flight again. But this time we will be flying our individual planes. We are our own pilots, and where we land and how we land will depend on our individual skill and initiative. And whether we win worldly renown or die in obscurity, we know that our ultimate success must be measured in such ideals as set forth by our dear old M.H.S.

CLASS WILL OF "1931"

To make our class will with a sigh,
Because the end of our high school career is so nigh.
All have had our sorrows and joys;
Just as little children want their toys.
We hope that our habits will be looked over
And our good habits (if we had any) will be practiced more.
We hope that we will not be missed
Though our names were once on Merrillville's Enrollment list.
To the readers thank as we have made,
And for those we have justly paid.
But the troubles that we had in school are not so bad,
As the troubles that might be had.

Class III of "1937"

We all will try to make a success, and hope the M.H.S. will progress.

*****

John Kocimovich has the privilege to stay out till ten;
This privilege he wills to Wilma Klerma.

The Roberts Twins
Give their abilities to all who sing.

Martin Luebcke wills his charms
To the beautiful Bernice Harms.

Ruth Struebig always smiling, as you can see,
Leaves her smiles to Grade B.

Andrew Schoppel wills his typing speed
To all who are in need.

Her golden locks
Luebcke leaves to Alice Bullock.

Malcolm Fraikin leaves his abilities to woe
To those whose abilities are low.

Ellis Vermon gives state chewing gum
All who do not have some.

Edna Nelson, a sort of a bashful boy,
Leaves his bashfulness to Walter Catlett.

Dora Frieter gives all her labor
To make the next year's school better.

Edna Schmidt wills her beauty to go to her teacher,
Who leaves her knowledge to teach the school.
We say we are teachers.

Norothy Piske, who is very witty,
Leaves her wit to Smitty.

Edna Nelson, who is very witty,
Leaves her wit to Smitty.

We strength to put the shot to go to Popp,
Leaves to Helen Popp.

PROPHCY OF THE CLASS '37

Once again May is here: the grass is green; the flowers are in bloom; and the birds are chirping with gayety and contentment. But it is not the May of old 1937; instead it is a new May, an even happier and more prosperous time. To be definite, it is May, 1982, and the day of the annual reunion of the Class of '37 from good ol' Merrillville High School. The place is the beautiful lawn of Paradise Park near the calm waters of a silver lake. The surface is dotted with small white sailboats that skim lightly o'er it. About the park are tall trees that sway gently in the cool afternoon breeze, swaying back and forth with the same melancholy, quiet, and easy swing of a huge pendulum as it slowly counts out each minute, day, and year until young boys become men and old men have passed on. An abundance of wild flowers speckle the green. In large and well-cared rock gardens are fresh-blooming flowers, filling the spring atmosphere with their sweet aroma.

Under the trees in a pleasing atmosphere of fresh grass, newly-blooming flowers, and ancient pines can be seen a gay, laughing party of middle aged men and women. A luncheon is being spread on the ground by some of the women, while the others busy themselves about, shaking hands, laughing, and joking over their old school experiences. In time the confusion and excitement of meeting old classmates again abates, and the party seat themselves in a large circle in the shade of an enormous tree, scarred and worn from a century of exposure.

As the party sets to work on its hearty meal, a hush falls over it. A tall, middle-aged man, presumably a minister--husband to one of the class--rises to address the party. After speaking in slow, quiet tones for a few moments, he again takes his seat. The floor is then taken by a chairman; he is not a member of the class. He delivers a speech of welcome, and then with a queer smile on his lips, he calls upon the different members of the class to tell something of their history for the past quarter of a century and their present standing, or as much of it as they "care" to relate.

The details of their biographies probably would not interest an outsider, but I am sure a brief sketch of each would.

Ella Demmon was called upon first. She had been head nurse in the Laiman Lacy Hospital in Chicago. She was in charge of many important cases, one of them being the case in which she had helped to find a cure for the cancer. She had also attended John Hecimovich after he had fallen in a thimble of hot steel while inspecting his mills.

Andrew Schoppel was next to clasp his hands behind his back and proudly relate his experiences. He had started his "career" as feeder on a butterfly ranch and had worked up until he is now owner of a large stock farm in Nebraska.

Dorothy Piske, always the good secretary, related that she was secretary of a great movement for advanced education and more efficient standards of living. She was advocating qualifications for elective offices and eugenics as means to these ends.

Next to reveal his experiences in the world was Martin

Lueboke. Always having advocated a better means of handling the nation's milk supply, he was now director of the Safe-from-Bacteria Milk Association. But things had not all been running smoothly, for he was running competition with a cheap substitute for milk, made from ground cracker crumbs and sulphur water.

It then became Ruth Struebig's turn at the wheel. She was a music teacher at the Skreech Music Academy for Young Women. She had set a record on the big trombone for playing the scale in sixty-one hundredths of a second.

Helen Keilman had long been private secretary to Eddie Cantor. She made the astounding record of discovering the underlying deep feeling expressed in his jokes.

Rita Krieter was the famous woman lawyer whose name had so often filled the front pages of the newspapers. Her fame had soared from the time she had defended the Merrillvill basketball team in a suit against the German Leaguers.

Cora and Dora Roberts may be heard over radio station W I N D every evening at seven o'clock. They are in such demand that most of the stations use recordings by them.

John Hecimovich, often called the "man of iron" by his friends, is president of the Gary Steel Mills. He has introduced the four-hour day and raised the minimum wage to seven dollars per day in order to encourage a higher standard of living.

Dorothy Popp next took the spotlight. She had reached the height of her ambition when she became famous as a torch singer. A newsboy once remarked while watching a juggler perform, after Dorothy had left the stage, that juggling of four balls between his hands looked like Dorothy Popp trying to watch her ex-husbands go by.

Edward Nelson had also reached the heights. As a geologist at Oxford, he had discovered the skeleton of Adam in an apple orchard near the school.

Ruth Luebecke had spent a great deal of her time in China as a missionary. After many years of tedious work she had finally convinced the children to take a bath at least once a year.

Melvin Fraikin is now an automobile manufacturer in Detroit. He drew the original plans for the new Zepher auto; the auto has eight wheels and an engine in the rear.

Barbara Schmidt is the famed composer of the late song hit, "Just a One Room Apartment and You." She is at the present leading an orchestra made up entirely of women.

No, there are no presidents or presidents' wives, no national heroes or heroines, and no millionaires or millionaires' wives--all the members of this class being honest and upright citizens. But the class is extremely wealthy, if you consider happiness, contentment, and service to their fellow-citizens as wealth. There are no saints among them; yet, yet there are no good-for-nothings. They are just fifteen good actors who know how to make the best of their short time upon the stage of life.

We started our sports activities in the fall of 1936 by playing two games of kitten ball with Calumet, being defeated by them in both games. We also organized three separate teams and among ourselves, the games being played after school hours. Thirty-five boys took part in total.

Later in the fall basketball practice began, with Mr. Robinson as our coach. About 40 came out for the sport and from these 10 were picked for the first team and 10 for the second team. We practiced the first week nights of each week, learning the field rules. We then played a game with Calumet, but we were not very successful in winning as all our players were young and inexperienced.

The Sectional Tourney was played March 5 at East Chicago in which we participated:

In the spring we started to practice for track and field events. We contacted against six schools. The first meet with Portage. In these meets we were quite successful.

GIRLS ATHLETICS

The girls were very fortunate as they only lost two of the regular squad last year. The girls were successful in every game except two and they were lost by a very close race. At the beginning of the year twenty-two girls came out for practice. Since then there have been only ten who have dropped out. The squad missed Lora Roberts as a forward for a few weeks as she was confined in the hospital with severe burns. The scores for the games are as follows:

DATE	OPPONENTS	PLACE	SCORE
			M.H.S.	OPPONENTS
Nov. 30	Wheeler	Here	18	9
Dec. 11	Portage	Here	17	15
Dec. 18	Alumni	Here	37	5
Dec. 22	Wash. Twp.	There	23	12
Jan. 8	Wheeler	There	15	10
Jan. 27	Portage	There	14	19
Feb. 11	Dyer	Here	30	18
Feb. 24	Dyer	Here	31	22

The girls will not have track this year (1937). They will be awarded a stamp on their sweater for G. A. A. meetings every Tuesday night after school.

The team wishes to thank Miss Jackson for her work and also the sincere cooperation of the yell leaders.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.1 million (Office for National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop services to meet the needs of older people, and the need to ensure that the services that are developed are based on evidence of what works. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for the care of older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the care of older people, and to ensure that the services that are developed are based on evidence of what works.
